2018to 2023 Vermicomposting

Sonari College started vermicomposting in 2016. It was planned and executed by Mr. Mintoo Kumar Gogoi, Associate Professor and Coordinator of IQAC, Sonari College. We know that vermicomposting is an organic and biological process in which earthworm species are primarily used to convert organic matter or biodegradable wastes into manure. The produced vermicomposts are rich in nutrition, and thus, they are widely used as biofertilizers in organic farming and sewage treatment plants. That is why Sonari College also planned to produce vermicompost for the kitchen gardens of both the hostels and the flower gardens of Sonari College, which are in the college premises. The department of Botany and the department of Zoology students are engaged with this plan. 70 students are involved in it.
